The site is still owned by the City of Alamogordo	petroleum, chlorinated solvents, methane in soils	City of Alamogordo					This site is Alamogordo's former municipal landfill, which operated from 1957 to 1988. The City plans to redevelop this site for community use, because of its central location. It is Alamogordo's hope that this re-use of the landfill will spur commercial development on adjacent properties. A state relief route runs north to south through the site. A phase II ESA was completed on the eastern portion of the site, and once Alamogordo has solid plans for the site, the investigation will continue on the Western portion. This will allow Alamogordo to determine the best course for redevelopment.
