Re: Yucca Growth Infrastructure, LLC
YGI Microgrid
Air Quality Permit #10883

Dear Permitting Program Staff,
YGI's latest permitting application paints the new microgrid as a green energy solution when in fact it will emit over 10 million tons of greenhouse gas emissions, over 124 tons of VOCs, & over 161 tons of yearly while creating unknown quantities of hazardous waste.

- ☒ Deny YGI's Air Quality Permit.
- ☒ Extend comment period by 60 days.
- ☒ Hold a public meeting before considering YGI's permit.
- ☒ I support technology but only when properly regulated to protect our air.

Hi Jesse and Jaimy:

Thank you for providing the responses dated 5/19/26.

The Department still needs a few items of information or documentation to satisfy our due diligence in asserting that we have all of the necessary information to rule the YGI Microgrid application administratively complete. In order for the Department to make an affirmative administrative completeness determination by 5/27/26, please provide the following additional information/clarification (and updated application materials where relevant) by 12pm MT on 5/27/26. Note that these correspond to the questions in our letter dated 5/12/26.

- (Question 11) The updated process summary in Section 3 of the application states that depleted anode exhaust is approximately 95 percent carbon dioxide. What compounds comprise the remaining 5% of the exhaust?

- (Question 13.d) Please provide the calculation of SSM emissions from hot swap of power modules.

- (Question 14.a) Was leak detection of natural gas and/or hydrogen considered? Please provide report(s) on leaks detected by the leak monitoring systems of operational Bloom systems.

- (Question 23) We need to confirm that the conditions in the R&D facility are representative of the conditions in the field where the fuel cells will be operated. It appears that the testing was conducted on a 65-kW module, not the 325- or 260-kW units that will be installed at the facility.

    Representativeness of Testing Conditions
    Please describe the operating conditions at the research and development (R&D) facility where the 65-kW module was tested and explain how these conditions are representative of actual field operating conditions for the proposed units.

    Applicability of Module-Level Testing
    Based on the information provided, testing appears to have been conducted on a single 65-kW module rather than on the full 260-kW or 325-kW systems proposed for installation. Please provide a detailed justification for why emissions data from a single module are representative of emissions from the fully integrated systems, which consist of four or five modules and additional components.

    Impact of Additional System Components
    The full system includes additional equipment such as a fuel processing module and an AC module. Please confirm whether these components generate emissions or affect system efficiency, and explain how their inclusion was accounted for in developing emission factors.

    Scaling to System-Level Emission Rates
    Please describe the methodology used to scale emissions from a 65-kW module to a system-level emission rate (e.g., lb/MW-hr). In your response, address whether efficiency losses or operational differences in the larger, integrated systems could result in higher emissions per unit of power output compared to a single module.

    Field or Full-System Testing
    Has any stack testing been conducted on a fully assembled 260-kW or 325-kW system under field conditions? If so, please provide those data. If not, please explain why module-level testing is sufficient to characterize emissions for the proposed units.

- (Question 24.a) The measured concentration of 0.20 ppm is two times the 1-hr NO2 standard of 100 ppb, so it does not appear that the NOx measured in the stack test is an ambient concentration. Based on the measured concentration, it appears that thermal NOx may be generated at low levels at the temperatures in the fuel cell. While these levels are very low, NMED needs to consider them due to the large scale of the proposed operation. What is the source of the NOx measured in the source test, if not the Energy Server unit?

- (Question 29.a) We need to understand more about the anode tailgas oxidizer. Why is the anode tailgas oxidizer required? What is the control efficiency? How often does the catalyst need to be replaced?

- (Question 32) Please provide the referenced vendor's data sheet that is used to generate the submitted emission factor.

- (Question 34) Based on the response to this question, the PTE for each stack shown in Table 2-G of the application appears to be incorrect. The 5-module stacks will have higher emissions than what is shown, and the 4-module stacks will have lower emissions than what is shown and what was modeled. The actual stacks to be constructed will receive exhaust from an unknown combination of 2 or 4 Energy Servers with outputs of 325-kW or 260-kW. Please confirm that this emission allocation is appropriate and conservative. To support this confirmation, please provide the number of 325-kW stacks and the number of 260-kW stacks to be installed, and identify the stacks on the facility plot plan and in Table 2-G.

Please let me and Julie know if any questions - thank you!

2026 Minor Source Emissions Inventory

Notice: The New Mexico Environment Department – Air Quality Bureau (Bureau) will conduct a Minor Source Emissions Inventory pursuant to 20.2.73.300 NMAC for calendar year 2026. This inventory applies to all facilities with air quality construction permits issued under 20.2.72 NMAC, including General Construction Permits (GCPs), as well as facilities registered under a Notice of Intent (NOI) pursuant to 20.2.73 NMAC. Owners, operators, and/or permittees are required to calculate and report actual tons per year of air pollutant emissions from individual equipment and from the facility as a whole. Facility-wide emissions for calendar year 2026 must be reported to the Bureau using the Bureau's online reporting tool during the submittal period of January 1 through April 1, 2027. Facilities are encouraged to sign up for Minor Source Emissions Inventory bulletins through the New Mexico Environment Department to receive updates and guidance regarding this requirement.

Good afternoon, Jesse,

Can you please submit the electronic files for the YGI Microgrid application? Files should include pdf full application file, excel UA2 and calculations files, Word UA1, UA3, and UA4, modeling files, and other supporting documents.

NSR regulations 20.2.72.203.A(3) require that the computations are provided. See below:

(3) Provide all information, including all calculations and computations, to describe the specific chemical and physical nature and to estimate the maximum quantities of any regulated air contaminants the source will emit through routine operations after construction, modification or installation is completed, and estimate maximum potential emissions during malfunction, startup, shutdown. With respect to a toxic air pollutant as defined by Subsection H of 20.2.72.401 NMAC this requirement only applies when the toxic air pollutant is emitted in such a manner that a permit is required under the provisions of 20.2.72.400 NMAC - 20.2.72.499 NMAC;

Also, would you please let us know when you will send us the Spanish translated application?

Notice: The New Mexico Environment Department – Air Quality Bureau (Bureau) will conduct a Minor Source Emissions Inventory pursuant to 20.2.73.300 NMAC for calendar year 2026. This inventory applies to all facilities with air quality construction permits issued under 20.2.72 NMAC, including General Construction Permits (GCPs), as well as facilities registered under a Notice of Intent (NOI) pursuant to 20.2.73 NMAC. Owners, operators, and/or permittees are required to calculate and report actual tons per year of air pollutant emissions from individual equipment and from the facility as a whole. Facility-wide emissions for calendar year 2026 must be reported to the Bureau using the Bureau's online reporting tool during the submittal period of January 1 through April 1, 2027. Facilities are encouraged to sign up for Minor Source Emissions Inventory bulletins through the New Mexico Environment Department to receive updates and guidance regarding this requirement.

Good afternoon, Jesse,

Can you please submit the electronic files for the YGI Microgrid application? Files should include pdf full application file, excel UA2 and calculations files, Word UA1, UA3, and UA4, modeling files, and other supporting documents.

NSR regulations 20.2.72.203.A(3) require that the computations are provided. See below:

(3) Provide all information, including all calculations and computations, to describe the specific chemical and physical nature and to estimate the maximum quantities of any regulated air contaminants the source will emit through routine operations after construction, modification or installation is completed, and estimate maximum potential emissions during malfunction, startup, shutdown. With respect to a toxic air pollutant as defined by Subsection H of 20.2.72.401 NMAC this requirement only applies when the toxic air pollutant is emitted in such a manner that a permit is required under the provisions of 20.2.72.400 NMAC - 20.2.72.499 NMAC;

Also, would you please let us know when you will send us the Spanish translated application?

Hi Jesse-

Please find attached a list of questions to support AQB's review of Yucca Growth Infrastructure, LLC's YGI Microgrid permit application.

In order to facilitate a timely determination of the permit application's administrative completeness, please revert with responses by a date that allows adequate time for AQB to evaluate the responses prior to the end of the 30-day application administrative review period (May 27).

Please let me and Julie know if you have any questions.

Julie,

Please see below for some clarifications on our recent response, in Q&A format.

Q: Is there one reformer per power module or one reformer per energy server, and is an external heat source is needed given that steam reforming is endothermic?

A: The Bloom Energy Server units don't require an external reformer to produce hydrogen. A reformer is thermally integrated within each power module. As described in item 3.b of our response (see also the referenced Youtube video), heat of reaction from the exothermic electrochemical reactions supplies heat of reaction to the endothermic reforming reaction. Surplus heat is rejected and the Energy Server requires no external heat input to accomplish reforming.

Q: Given that hydrogen has a low autoignition temperature (lower than the operating temperature of the power modules), how is the system designed to ensure integrity?

A: The cathode and anode are separated by a barrier, namely a solid ceramic electrolyte. The anode and cathode are coatings upon the electrolyte surface. The cathode side is in contact with air, and molecular oxygen (O_2) is converted to oxygen ions (O^{2-}) by electricity generated on the anode side. The anode side is in contact with fuel (H_2) which is converted to steam (H_2O) and electricity as hydrogen and oxygen ions meet within the electrolyte. Therefore, hydrogen is never in contact with molecular oxygen. Oxygen cannot pass through the electrolyte and remains separate from hydrogen within the reformed fuel. As stated in item 25 of our response, product fuel and atmospheric air follow separate and isolated paths within the product.

Have a good weekend!

Hi Jesse,

Last time I talked to you, we discussed that were not sure about the location of the reformer associated with the SOCF. Can you please find out if the system has an external reformer to process natural gas or are does the reforming occurs directly inside the cell through DIR or IIR? Thank you for clarifying.

Hi Julia,

I confirmed that the system does not have an external reformer. Fuel is processed in an integrated manner within the enclosure. Reforming takes place on the fuel cell as fuel crosses over the anode side.

Let me know if you need anything else.

Great, thank you. This is very helpful.

Since the reforming occurs directly inside the cell would this be a Direct Internal Reforming (DIR) or Indirect Internal Reforming (IIR) process?

Thank you!

Julia,

Still waiting to hear back about the question below.

However, for Abra's question, Bloom customarily refers to a group of Bloom Energy Servers (usually 4) that share a stack as a "cluster" of Energy Servers.

Great, thank you. This is very helpful.

Since the reforming occurs directly inside the cell would this be a Direct Internal Reforming (DIR) or Indirect Internal Reforming (IIR) process?

Thank you!

Hi Julia,

I confirmed that the system does not have an external reformer. Fuel is processed in an integrated manner within the enclosure. Reforming takes place on the fuel cell as fuel crosses over the anode side.

Let me know if you need anything else.

Hi Jesse,

Last time I talked to you, we discussed that were not sure about the location of the reformer associated with the SOCF. Can you please find out if the system has an external reformer to process natural gas or are does the reforming occurs directly inside the cell through DIR or IIR? Thank you for clarifying.

Hi Julia,

Concerning DIR vs. IIR, Bloom's technology would be closer to the DIR type if we had to pick one.

Julia,

Still waiting to hear back about the question below.

However, for Abra's question, Bloom customarily refers to a group of Bloom Energy Servers (usually 4) that share a stack as a "cluster" of Energy Servers.

Hi Jesse-

Some follow up questions please:

I just wanted to clarify, so each of the 2275 things in Table 2-G (SOFC-1, SOFC-2, … SOFC-2275) should be called a "cluster"?

Or am I misunderstanding (or maybe asked the wrong question)? We please need to know how to refer to those 2275 things (the red dots in the screenshot).

And then what is the correct nomenclature for these 425 "things" that are purple outlines/boxes called (that have the red dots inside of the them)?

And from these 425 "things," do the emissions come out from a single point? Or are the emissions released from multiple points in those things?

Can you also please provide a description and a picture/visual for what those 425 things each look like? Are they similar to a building or a tent? This will be helpful for the modeling.

Can you also provide some sort of flow chart or similar to how the Bloom Energy components are connected/build together e.g., cell → stack → cluster → module → server → platform?

Please let us know if questions- thank you!

Yes, “cluster” is how they refer to the 2275 release points. You understand it correctly.

Hi Julia,

Concerning DIR vs. IIR, Bloom's technology would be closer to the DIR type if we had to pick one.

Julia,

Still waiting to hear back about the question below.

However, for Abra's question, Bloom customarily refers to a group of Bloom Energy Servers (usually 4) that share a stack as a "cluster" of Energy Servers.

Great, thank you. This is very helpful.

Since the reforming occurs directly inside the cell would this be a Direct Internal Reforming (DIR) or Indirect Internal Reforming (IIR) process?

Thank you!

Hi Julia,

I confirmed that the system does not have an external reformer. Fuel is processed in an integrated manner within the enclosure. Reforming takes place on the fuel cell as fuel crosses over the anode side.

Let me know if you need anything else.

Hi Jesse,

Last time I talked to you, we discussed that were not sure about the location of the reformer associated with the SOCF. Can you please find out if the system has an external reformer to process natural gas or are does the reforming occurs directly inside the cell through DIR or IIR? Thank you for clarifying.

And from these 425 "things," do the emissions come out from a single point? Or are the emissions released from multiple points in those things?
No, each of the 2,275 clusters contains a distinct release point.

Can you also please provide a description and a picture/visual for what those 425 things each look like? Are they similar to a building or a tent? This will be helpful for the modeling.
They are more like a parking garage than a building or a tent. They are two stories high, with grated flooring, concrete pillars for support, and open sides. Air can pass through them while they provide structural support. Each cluster has the Bloom Energy Servers stacked two high with exhaust manifolded to exit from a single release point. I've copied our modeler John in case he can provide any additional details you need on source characterization. I will also check if Bloom has a drawing or photo.

Can you also provide some sort of flow chart or similar to how the Bloom Energy components are connected/build together e.g., cell → stack → cluster → module → server → platform?
The general merology is as follows. I'll check if there is a better visual aid we can get you.

cell → stack -> power module -> energy server→ cluster -> inverter group/platform

Hi Abra,

Yes, "cluster" is how they refer to the 2275 release points. You understand it correctly.

Concerning the 425 "things," I informally call that an "inverter group," as they have common electrical appurtenances.

Hi Jesse-

Some follow up questions please:

I just wanted to clarify, so each of the 2275 things in Table 2-G (SOFC-1, SOFC-2, … SOFC-2275) should be called a "cluster"?

Or am I misunderstanding (or maybe asked the wrong question)? We please need to know how to refer to those 2275 things (the red dots in the screenshot).

And then what is the correct nomenclature for these 425 "things" that are purple outlines/boxes called (that have the red dots inside of the them)?

And from these 425 “things,” do the emissions come out from a single point? Or are the emissions released from multiple points in those things?

Can you also please provide a description and a picture/visual for what those 425 things each look like? Are they similar to a building or a tent? This will be helpful for the modeling.

Can you also provide some sort of flow chart or similar to how the Bloom Energy components are connected/build together e.g., cell → stack → cluster → module → server → platform?

Please let us know if questions- thank you!

Hi Julia,

Please find attached the editable excel file for the SSM calculations.

Air emissions (natural gas venting) will occur during desulfurization bed media replacements and during desulfurization unit initial start-ups. Startup emissions included in the attached calculations include the unit initial startup at the time of commissioning. The maintenance emissions include the desulfurization bed media replacements. It will take 4 purges to clear the vessels, replace the media, and restart the operation of the vessel. The maintenance emissions are inclusive of both "shutting down" and "restarting" the vessel during a maintenance event.

Let me know if you have any additional questions!

Hi Julia,

None of the operations covered by the permit will be subject to 20.2.23 NMAC, per 20.2.23.108.B(3) NMAC. I think the relevant part of the application is confusing. However, we intended to refer to pre-permit site clearing activities that would disturb surface areas rather than suggesting that there were permitted activities covered by that rule.

Concerning haul roads, the site will not have any bulk material handling and transport operations during operations. Therefore, there should not be any haul roads discussed in the application.

Let me know if you have any other questions.

Hi Julia,

Isn't this the same company as Acoma, LLC under a different name? The parent company being BorderPlex Digital Assets, LLC?

We don't have any enforcement actions for them.

I checked if BorderPlex Digital Assets, LLC, the parent company, has had previous charges as stated in the Disclosure Form for question 3 & 4. I did not find anything from the internet sources.

Good luck with it.

Re: Air Quality Permit Application No. NSR 10883 (Agency Interest No. 41351 - PRN20260001).

Dear Amanda Marrufo,

This letter is in response to your air quality permit application dated April 22, 2026, to construct the YGI Microgrid near Santa Teresa, NM in Doña Ana County. The New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) received the application on April 27, 2026.

Through this letter, NMED is providing notice that an extension of time is needed to process the above referenced application on the grounds that good cause is found for the following reasons:

- "The need to have public hearings" (20.2.72.207(C)(1)).
- "The permit application requires review of unusually complex technical and regulatory issues" (20.2.72.207(C)(5)).

Thus, in accordance with 20.2.72.207(C) NMAC, this letter extends the deadline set forth in 20.2.72.207(B) for a length of time not to exceed ninety days beyond the original August 25, 2026 decision deadline for Air Quality Permit Application No. NSR 10883 (Agency Interest No. 41351 - PRN20260001).

Original issuance/denial deadline:	August 25, 2026
Period of extension:	90 days
New issuance/denial deadline:	November 23, 2026

MEMORANDUM

TO: Michelle Miano, New Mexico Environment Department (NMED/Environmental Protection Division (EPD), Division Director

FROM: Eastern Research Group, Inc. (ERG)
2677 Prosperity Avenue, Suite 450
Fairfax, VA 22031

SUBJECT: Review of Solid Oxide Fuel Cell Microgrid Applications and Review of Recent Emissions Testing Results for SOFC Operations

DATE: 05/12/2026

Eastern Research Group, Inc. (ERG) is under contract with the New Mexico Environment Department - Air Quality Bureau (NMED-AQB) to provide air quality permitting and technical engineering assistance to NMED-AQB in a manner consistent with technical direction received. Under NMED Contract ID# 25-667-4091-44019, PO# 66700-0000045328, ERG received Notice to Proceed (NTP ERG 26-01) for ERG to provide Clean Air Act (CAA) Permitting Research and Technical Engineering Support for specific matters as identified by NMED-AQB.

Consistent with the direction received from NMED-AQB, ERG initiated technical engineering support for CAA stationary source permitting in relation to sources that have recently submitted construction permit applications in the state of New Mexico. Specifically, ERG was directed to conduct research and provide technical engineering expertise specific to Clean Air Act (CAA) construction permitting analyses, including but not limited to review of publicly available documentation for the use of solid oxide fuel cell (SOFC) arrays across the United States and their potential feasibility for large-scale use in support of the data center industry.

Specific to the technical analyses provided herein, ERG has continued reviewing recent CAA construction permit applications received by NMED-AQB for proposed microgrid operations recently submitted by Yucca Growth Infrastructure, LLC (YGI) with a specific focus on the potential technical feasibility of the site operations proposed by YGI based on their scale in relation to the known application of SOFC technologies for power generation in other contexts.

In the following sections of the enclosed technical memorandum, ERG has included the following sections:

- A comparison of YGI's proposed site operations with other large-scale SOFC deployments across the United States.
- A presentation of specific considerations for YGI's recent application submissions in relation to documentation presented by Grant & Eisenhofer (G&E) in their April 7, 2026 memorandum related to the In re Williams Four Corners, LLC, Sims Mesa CDP Compressor Station matter.
- An in-depth comparison of source testing results between the April 8, 2026, and April 27, 2026, submissions to NMED-AQB for SOFC units.

Administrative Record NSR 10833_002095

- Additional potential questions to pose to the applicant for NMED-AQB's review and consideration.

DEPLOYMENT OF SOLID OXIDE FUEL CELL BASED MICROGRIDS IN THE U.S.

YGI is proposing to deploy a microgrid to generate electricity for a data center using solid oxide fuel cells (SOFC) manufactured by Bloom Energy. SOFCs, and specifically Bloom Energy SOFCs, have been deployed for various sources throughout the U.S. and abroad. However, compared to the examples below, the proposed electrical generation capacity of the YGI microgrid exceeds the capacity of those microgrids by orders of magnitude. Only one of the examples below has a capacity greater than 0.5 GW, while YGI's proposed electrical generation capacity is over 2.0 GW.

Common benefits of deploying microgrids compared to facilities with combustion-based emissions are relatively lower criteria air pollutant (CAP) emissions, reliability, and quick ramp up. In 2025, TCEQ issued a standard electric generating unit (EGU) permit that included Bloom Energy's ES-6.5 units, the same units being proposed with YGI's recent air permit application submission to NMED. Delaware has two locations integrated with their electric utility that use Bloom Energy SOFCs (Bloom Energy ES-5 and ES-5700, which are older units). Intel has a microgrid in Santa Clara, California using Bloom energy SOFCs to power a data center. The SOFCs used in support of Intel's Santa Clara, California data center has expanded over time where SOFCs serve as backup power, reduce reliance on diesel-powered emergency generators, and reduce reliance on the primary electricity grid. Intel also has a microgrid attached to a data center in Bangalore, India. Both Intel microgrids have been in operation for over a decade. In 2018, the U.S. department of energy published a report "State of States: Fuel Cells in America 2017," which covered general fuel cell use but also included a discussion of SOFCs specifically as well as stationary fuel cells. The report described state activities based on deployments (commercial and government), incentives, and their function (including large and small stationary fuel cells).

AEP Ohio	OEPA, PUCO	Bloom Energy	Unknown	0.007 GW	Supply power to 2 large data centers	Permit to Install & Operate	Permits approved, construction started in 2026

Delaware - Red Lion & Brookside

The two SOFC installations in Delaware are the Red Lion and Brookside installations. Both sources use Bloom Energy ES-5 units, while Red Lion used to use (and may still use) model ES-5700 units since the permit was a revision to replace some or all ES-5700 units. These units are not used for a single source.

Chen et al. 2020[2] has performance data from the fuel cells at these two sources as a well as a discussion of the financial impacts the facilities had on Delaware from both the company and public perspective.

Ohio - AEP Ohio

The Bloom fuel cell model is not clarified in the approved Permit to Install & Operate at AEP Ohio.

Texas - Yellow Box Cleburn

Yellow Box uses the same fuel cell (model ES 6.5) identified by YGI. They are proposing to provide power for proposed but not built data centers in the area. It is not clear if any of those data centers have construction permits yet.

There are data centers planned for Cleburn Texas, where Yellow Box is located, according to aterio.io. The data centers are not linked to the Yellow Box project but are linked to a Pacifico power station that will use turbines for electricity generation. The Fort Spunky (Pacifico) data centers were rejected by Hood County and moved to neighboring Cleburn County.

[1] This is an estimate based on the values seen in the source (started at 1 MW, have multiple expansions including 1 5 MW that could be come 10 MW)

[2] Energy, economic, and social impacts of a clean energy economic policy:

Fuel cells deployment in Delaware

California - Intel Santa Clara

Intel Santa Clara uses Bloom energy fuel cells to power their data center in parallel with grid power. They also have international fuel cell installations. They have expanded multiple times and began relying less on grid power (10 to 20 MW based on the starting values and expansions mentioned in the Santa Clara case study)[3]. Bloom Energy SOFCs have been deployed at Intel Santa Clara site since 2014, and Intel is planning to add more Bloom Energy fuel cells at their Santa Clara campus[4]. Intel seems pleased with the results, noting less reliance on grid power and reliable electricity availability reducing reliance on diesel fuel in emergencies. Intel had a number of takeaways from the Santa Clara case study:

1. Plan for scale and phased installations.
2. Avoid power grid export because of regulations either not allowing Intel to get paid for electricity or legally prohibiting the export outright. They use a system that disconnects the fuel cells if power is about to be exported to the grid.
3. How to build in grid independence
4. Synchronize with grid power and backup generators

International - Intel Bangalore

Intel Bangalore uses the fuel cells as the primary source with the grid serving as the backup. This reduces the need for diesel but it seems like there may still be some emergency generators present if needed but not as much under traditional power deployment scenarios.

SIMS MESA CONCERNS

Table 2 presents a summary of specific considerations for YGI's recent application submissions in relation to documentation presented by Grant & Eisenhofer (G&E) in their April 7, 2026 memorandum related to the In re Williams Four Corners, LLC, Sims Mesa CDP Compressor Station matter.

Table 2. Summary of ERG Observations and Potential Concerns Regarding YGI Microgrid Air Permit Application Submissions and Sims Mesa Historical Permitting Precedent

Sims Mesa Concern	How NMED/ERG is handling with YGI Microgrid
"NMED failed to adequately investigate whether Williams Four Corners, LLC exerted control over the natural gas wells supplying energy to the Sims Mesa, which were owned by a separate entity."	A few of the potential questions to the applicant aim to clarify the relationship between the microgrid and the following: 1. The proposed datacenter: The cover letter of the application stated that the application "covers all of the pollutant-emitting activities subject to permitting for the YGI Microgrid and the data center". Potential questions inquire about: a. The relationship to the data center, including ownership, operational control, and how the facilities will interact. b. Whether the data center will be solely dependent on the YGI Microgrid for their power source and the extent to which the YGI Microgrid will supply backup power to the data center. c. Clarification of any potential pollutant-emitting equipment on-site at the data center, including combustion equipment, spray booths, cooling towers, heaters/burners for fuel conditioning, etc. 2. The adjacent electrical infrastructure: Potential questions request a description of the ownership and function of the adjacent electrical infrastructure (including if it is utility-owned/a primary electrical grid, or a privately owned infrastructure), as well as if this infrastructure will serve multiple customers or solely the data center. Understanding these two relationships will help to more strongly clarify if these two facilities should be a single source and whether the data center exerts control over the YGI Microgrid (or vise versa).
"EPA concluded that NMED's reliance on the applicant's statements was unreasonable. NMED was therefore required to establish a "more thorough permit record" and make appropriate changes in the permit. If a finding of common control was made, NMED would be required to determine adjacency." "Although EPA's objection did not ultimately reach the adjacency prong, the case illustrates the evidentiary rigor required of any single source analysis of Project Jupiter by NMED. A potential citizen suit challenging NMED's single source determination can be expected to focus on whether the department verified the	Depending on the detail of their response, NMED may need to request further documentation of the applicant's statements regarding their relationship to the microgrid and adjacent electrical infrastructure. This can include: a. Ownership: • Corporate organizational charts (including affiliates) • Operating agreements • SEC filings • Joint venture agreements • List of owners/shareholders • Ownership of transmission (for electrical infrastructure) b. Control: • Any O&M agreement • Power dispatch agreements

Table 4. Comparison of Hourly and Annual Potential-To-Emit (PTE) Calculation Methodologies Between the April 8, 2026, NSR Permit Application (Acoma, LLC) and April 27, 2026 NSR Permit Application (YGI) for SOFC-Based Microgrid Operations

Data	April 8, 2026 NSR permit application submitted by Acoma, LLC	April 27, 2026 NSR permit application submitted by YGI
Hourly Potential Emissions (lb/hr)	(lb/MW-hr) x (MW) Hourly emissions (lb/hr) are calculated by multiplying the lb/MW-hr emission factor by the proposed MW rating of the SOFC microgrid (760.5 MW or 1,053 MW).	(lb/MW-hr) x (MW) x (1 + Safety Factor) Hourly emissions (lb/hr) are calculated by multiplying the lb/MW-hr emission factor by the proposed MW rating of the SOFC microgrid (2.462 MW). A safety factor of 15% (x 1.15) is applied.
Annual Potential Emissions (tpy)	(lb/hr) x (8,760 hr/yr) / (2,000 lb/ton) Annual emissions (tpy) are calculated by simply multiplying the hourly emission rate by 8,760 hours per year, assuming continuous operation.	(lb/hr) x (8,760 hr/yr) / (2,000 lb/ton) Annual emissions (tpy) are calculated by simply multiplying the hourly emission rate by 8,760 hours per year, assuming continuous operation.

Subject: New Mexico Environment Department Public Notice Request

Good morning, Lensi.

The New Mexico Environment Department – Air Quality Bureau would like to request some public service announcements for a Notice of Hearing for a New Source Review Air Quality Permit Application for:

Yucca Growth Infrastructure, LLC – Yucca Microgrid permit application No. 10883.

Our goal is to provide information about this hearing to both the English and Spanish speaking communities near Santa Teresa, NM. We would like to know if two PSA's can be run during primetime hours at least once a day for 30 days between August 14 and September 14. The PSA's will be roughly 600 words long.

Let me know if there will be a charge for this, if so please provide a quote.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

You don't often get email from kccounts@nmsu.edu. Learn why this is important

CAUTION: This email originated outside of our organization. Exercise caution prior to clicking on links or opening attachments.

Hi Sarah,

We actually can't run a PSA (or any individual message) that long. We have network programming that limits the length of our breaks, so messages are kept to 15-20 seconds. We can adapt the PSA to give basic info and drive interested persons to the site where they can follow up. Our rates amount to about $50 per day for radio and $70 for TV (for two spots per day) but there are discounts for nonprofits also. That's not my department, but I'm copying Donna Dollar, our business outreach coordinator, to give you the specifics. It does take a bit of time to create TV spots, so we probably wouldn't be able to start running until at least late next week.

In the meantime, you may put the info including the full PSA text in our Community Calendar (free)

https://www.krwg.org/community-calendar

Just select the range of dates starting 8/14 and ending 9/14 or before.

Thanks Sarah! I hope we can help - our audience is highly interested in this subject as you can imagine. We are happy to conduct an interview for one of our newscasts about it. Let me know whom that would be and we'll set something up asap.
